With music, stories and aerial photographs, archaeologist and musician David Knight will help celebrate and start a conversation about the historic Wilson farm.

The fate of the farmhouse has been the subject of heated debate in Guelph – find a new use for it or demolish it.

David and his band-mates Scott Morrison and Ben Grossman of the Kazoo musical group will provide the music and participants will provide the conversation to explore future possibilities for the farmhouse.

Ben Bradley, project manager of the REEP design team, will show how the Wilson farmhouse can become a sustainable living showroom.

Come, join in and discuss your ideas - let's celebrate the Wilson farmhouse and explore ways to secure its future.
